Class of 1936

Scholarship is just the understanding, the intimate understanding with imagination and with love, of the noblest things of the past; the great thoughts, writings, doings, aspirations, which still live, but live precariously because they will die if they are not understood, die if they are not loved.

ROBERT REID

You'll not be any poorer if you smile along your way,
And days will be no darker for the cheerful things you say,
And life will be less doleful if errors you can mend;
While you work for wealth and wisdom, take time to be a friend.

Time Was When---

NORMA BONENFANT

How does the modern girl compare with grandmother? T modern girl is just as good looking and far more intelligent and b ter educated, but does she not lack an ineffable something? The you women of today are better pals, better sports, more entertaining co panions perhaps than were their grandmothers, but they are no long sirens with glittering adornment. Then grandmother could conju her victims by playing on little vanities, telling them how big an handsome and wonderful they were, and could keep whole flocks men eating out of her hand by feeding them on the angel food of fla tery. But now these old-fashioned charms and wiles are antiquated b gones.

But, of course, the modern girl faces a problem which grand mother never had to face—the problem of making her living outsid the home. Grandmother did not have to bother her pretty head abou a livelihood, because in her time it was the custom for the men of th family to support the women. As long as women hung upon the par- ent bough, fathers and brothers supplied them with food and clothing. But nowadays as soon as a girl gets through high school, father and brother wash their hands of her, and she has to fare forth and earn her own board and keep. Hence in the cutthroat competition of the busi- ness world the modern girl hardens to her job and loses the softness, the delicacy, the daintiness of the grandmother.

Thus the young modern woman is in danger of losing her fem- ininity. Maidens in trailing chiffons and fluttering ribbons are sup- planted now by romping girls in pants and shorts that display every defect of the anatomy, grotesque caricatures of their little brothers. Grandmother was known for her gentleness, sweetness, and tenderness. The modern girl climbed down from that pedestal when she began to out-smoke her brothers. Now too often men are the pursued, and women the pursuers. Boys used to swarm around a pretty girl like bees around a honeypot, but in this day and age girls do the swarm- ing. Does not Miss Universe, with her mannish customs too often lack the lovely femininity of grandmother?

Heard in Miss Foster's Class

"Can any girl tell me the three foods required to keep the body in health?"

There was a silence till one maiden put up her hand and replied, "Yer breakfast, yer dinner, and yer supper."

The Class Will

We, the class of nineteen hundred and thirty-six, of Taunton High School, in the County of Bristol, do declare this our last Will and Testament in the manner and form following:

We bequeath

To Mr. Ward and the teachers, our sincere appreciation for their four years of patient guidance.

To the Class of 1937, our modest manner in controlling the vain and dignified feeling that accompanies our senior status.

To the Class of 1938, the signal honor of following in our illustrious footsteps.

To the Class of 1939, the encouragement that eternity is really only four years.

Personal Bequests:

Captain Galligan of Company A: To the next captain of my company, the cup which I shall win in June.

Captain Gutowski of Company B: To the next captain of my company, the cup which I shall win in June.

Captain Witherell of Company C: To the next captain of my company, the cup which I shall win in June.

Captain Briggs of Company D: To the next captain of my company, the cup which I shall win in June.

Alan Ainscough: To Bob Bentley, '38, two packages of Wheatena, so that he may grow up to be as strong a man as his idol, Popeye.

Mary Walsh: To a certain gentleman, my three weekly library periods, with the hope that he will use them to advantage.

Francis Orsi: To Miss Stone, an ample supply of unabridged dictionaries. May she find more meanings than Shakespeare for the word "sleep".

To Rita McGuinness '39, a muzzle for her gigantic police dog, so that unsuspecting suitors may venture to say "good-night" without danger of losing their pants.

Lawrence Carney: To Edgar Carney '37, the responsibility of keeping the name of Carney prominent in the history of the Taunton High School.

Stuart Perkins: To Matthew Mitchell '38, my personal formula on "how to take Latin without homework".

Norma Bonenfant: To Mr. McManus, my True Story magazines.

Robert Robbins: To anyone that wants it, the whole sch May he make the most of it.

Latin 1 A: To Miss Atwell, the wish that never again will have a class with two like Wells and Galligan present at the same t Marianna Dow: To Mr. Carroll, another willing runner-to-t office.

Virginia Carr: To Mary Kiernan '37, my ability to app Miss Atwell's ire when I stroll in at 10.40 after a gym session.

Frances Wilbur: To Carolyn Guillo '37, a gross of stout n books in which to jot down Miss Stone's annotations and Miss S house's "beaucoup de phrases".

William Garvin: To the next president of the Student Coun the hope that he will not be called upon to make a speech wherever goes.

Emily Tucker: To some poor member of the class of '37, th squeaky, rickety chair in 123 with the fond wish that it may someti be repaired.

Neil Sweet: To Mr. Carroll, a gong that he may silence h classes by saying, "All right; All right."

Loretta Manter: To Paul Manter '37, my surplus diplom credits to aid him in gathering together his seventy by next June.

Edward Koehler: To the hard-working students of Taunto High, some much needed sleep.

Jean Tetlow and Emily Tucker: To Irene Lafrance and Bett Lynch, our ability to omit important engagements in order to atte regular basketball practice.

Harriot Gallagher: To Peggy Williams '37, better luck than had in appearing nonchalant when I haven't prepared my Latin.

Shirley Young: To Gertrude Waite '37, the fifteenth crack the floor from the third window horizontally toward the middle Room 123 to use as a gum receptacle.

Helen Nozko: To Elizabeth Manson '37, one bottle of red ink one bottle of green ink, and one bottle of blue ink for her colorful gam of tit-tat-too.

This, our last Will and Testament, we do declare by setting ou hand and Seal unto the date of year above said.

THE SENIOR CLASS

Attested by Jimmy Foxx Sheridan
Babe Deidreckson Salthouse

The boy who had often heard his father talk about the World War finally asked: "Father, did anyone help you win the last war?"

IT CANNOT HAPPEN HERE

Miss McMahon without her daily persecution of gum-chewers
A chemistry student not breaking a test tube the whole year
Helen Golden passing an algebra test
Miss Atwell not saying "Tempus Fugit" at least twice a day
Eddie Galligan minus a superiority complex
Fewer working periods, more relaxation periods, and no home work
Elevator from the basement to the third floor
A no-school signal for the High School on stormy days
Free lunches at the drills
No more report cards to carry to irate parents
Senior privileges lasting from January to June
Mr. Hathaway without statistics
Rosemary Wood failing a test
Fran Orsi running out of jokes
Loring Briggs stumbling in his Latin translations
Mr Ward with a Harvard clip
Alvin Wells running out of flowery phrases
Winning an argument from Mr. Decker
Catching Eddie Koehler awake in economics
Jo Gifford forgetting her sophistication
Miss Atwell without a comeback
A one-cent sale in the lunchroom
Harriot Gallagher missing one dance
Clint Friedman wearing a white shirt
Mr Mullen feeling like a feather in the breeze
A slot machine producing homework for a dime
William Bellamy accepting a statement without argument
No red ink on report cards

COMPANIONS OF THE GLADE

EMILY TUCKER

Pine trees,
Silent, staunch
Sentinels of the forest,
Bending
Majestic heads
To the wind, their lord.

Lively,
Bright-eyed
Squirrels in the glade,
Scrambling
From limb to limb
On the pines, so tall.

I Choose Such a Friend

LORING BRIGGS

Herein are described three requirements, the possessor of wh might be the friend of any youth. First of all, my model friend m be a good sport in all his activities. Although opinions vary as to t true spirit of good sportsmanship, the consensus is that a sportsm always loses with a smile, always claps the winner on the back, alwa hides his disappointment. I beg to differ with this belief. Give me t man, who, upon losing fairly, will say," Well, I lost, but frankly I rather have won. I'll be glad to give you a licking some day!" Tha the kind of fellow with whom I should enjoy participating in spor games, or what have you. I desire no hypocrisy among my frien and associates. To me, frank good humor after a victory or a defe is a sure indication that strong friendship is in the offing.

In addition to this, my friend must be understanding and symp thetic. When my spirits are low after some disappointment, I pref solitude and quiet to gushing indignation on the part of some wel meaning but thoughtless companion. The fellow who knows just wh attitude to assume in such a position can be more of a comfort in tim of distress than the artless "pal" who noisily attempts to cheer me wit trite expressions such as, "Keep your chin up!" and, "Better luck nex time!"

Finally, my friend must be the athletic, outdoor type of fellow interested in competitive sports. When the sky is cloudless and the bir are singing, who wants to settle in an easy chair and discuss the Ethi pian problem with a stuffy, voluble companion? Not I! However, if m friend should suggest a set of tennis or a round of golf, I'd look for ward to an enjoyable afternoon and appreciate his taste. Do you no agree that if my friend possessed these characteristics, he would be model companion?

SUCCESS

JEAN TETLOW

Success comes to the men who try
  Again and yet again;
Behind them many failures lie;
  These are the bravest men.

They set their chins and march ahead,
  Determined yet to win;
Their courage bids us take our stead:
  Today, again begin.

FAIREST FLOWER

(Written in April upon receiving from Texas a Blue Bonnet, the state flower)

STEPHANIE GWIZDAK

Strife in the Flower Kingdom!
All on needles and pins!!
Lilies sobbing to Roses,
"Here's where the trouble begins."

One thought the Rose the loveliest;
A second, the Lily most fair;
Legions voted for Violets,
Burgeoning here and there.

But a mirthful cherub, listening,
Threw down, for innocent fun,
A handful of blue from the heavens,
And straightway the Blue Bonnet won!

METAMORPHOSIS

Tiny,
Tender sprouts,
Seeking warmth and light;

Stately,
Scented lilies,
Spreading joy so bright.

WE COMMON FOLK

RAYMOND SMITH

There are men in all professions,
Whose names to us spell fame;
But need the plodding, faithful folk
Bow down their heads in shame?

Will Washington and Lincoln,
And Longfellow and Poe,
With Edison and Lindbergh,
Whom all the world well know,

And preachers and philosophers,
Deft wielders of the pen—
Will they attain a seat up There,
Before us common men?

A Memorable Experience

ALLEN HATCH

After thumbing over the mildewed pages of history, I have finally decided that I should most like to have been present when Sir Walter Raleigh gloriously saved the royal feet of Elizabeth from that far-famed puddle of—mud! To see Sir Walter in action at any time would be gratifying, but to see him graciously rise to this magnificent occasion would be the delight of any news photographer. Imagine the naturalness of the scene: the dashing Sir Walter on his afternoon stroll, attired in his satin acrobatic tights and fluffy coat below the stiff-necked accordian collar, supporting his chin and tickling his ears; the self-abiding, spacious Elizabeth, in company of the troupe, approaching the muddy pool directly in her path. Imagine her hesitating on the brink and coyly sliding Sir Walter a glance. Imagine this gallant gentleman hastily slipping from his beautiful plush cloak and laying it gently over the offending puddle with a flourish and a low, clicking bow. And then, as his economical mind began to function, imagine his thoughts as—squash—the royal foot ground his beautiful velvet mantle into the mire! A unique scene with hidden humor and perfect timing! However, I must not swoon with excitement, and this is the reason why: the most reliable authorities believe that this gallant exhibition never took place!

THE SOULS WHO DARED

A Rondeau

MARY WALSH

The souls who dared the guns lie dead;
The fields have drunk the blood they shed;
Yet still we laud those men who gave
Their lives so fearlessly and brave:
We know now how and why they bled:

The host that knew no fear or dread,
The men who fought and never fled,
The line that laughed upon its grave—
The souls who dared.

O Lord, we pray the years ahead
May bind us to our martyred dead;
O Victor, give them love, and save
For us down here the peace we crave;
O God, protect the lands that bred
The souls who dared.

AUTUMN

STUART PERKINS

Scarlet, copper, golden,
Crimson, bronze, and brown:
The Artist spills His colors
All up the hills and down.

The sun lights up a thousand lamps
Within the woodland trees;
Each leaflet is a tiny torch
Ablaze with every breeze.

The tawny mountains beckon,
And if you lift your eyes,
The peace of God comes down to you
From blue October skies.

WANDER-THIRST

MARY WALSH

Oh, for me the life of a wanderer,
And travel in distant lands,
From the gorgeous gardens of Babylon
To the parched Arabian sands!

Oh, for me the city of Caesars
And the dazzling "hall of snow";
Let me sail on a Scottish river
While the Highland breezes blow.

Oh, for me an evening in Paris,
A walk in an old English lane;
Let me have one German summer
Before I turn home again.

BEACH SCENES

A. ROWLAND

Ebbing tide—
Soft, muddy beach,
With a stench of dying weed;
Broken shells that tell the tale
Of some tiny life's decease.

Rising tide—
Smooth, shining sea,
Mirrowing the sky's bright hue;
Silvery flash that marks the path
That a minnow just streaked through.

NEW ENGLAND

STUART PERKINS

The highways of New England
Are trails of sheer delight
That wind about to rocky shores
And many a piney height.

Through elm-tree shaded byways
Where old homes glimmer white,
The cheery lights wink welcome
To travelers at night.

And ever in each little town,
From a grassy, crested hill,
The spire of a church looks down
In benediction still.

I Have Cause for Irritation

ALLEN HATCH

Among my favorite aversions are three that never fail to p havoc with my sense of humor. They rotate with such regularity to become increasingly distasteful with each successive advent. To with, I have the somewhat drowsy habit of gradually rousing my each morning, and it is a trial of my nerves to be awakened instan and to have to dress the moment my eyes are opened. Des my frantic efforts to assume what is sometimes known as will-po
I have never been able to make myself vault out of bed the very m ute I awake. When I have to get up in a hurry, my poor rela muscles, suddenly jerked into motion, blubber for help. And I assure you they have my heartfelt sympathy, for I like to kick aro and stretch before I summon strength to throw off the covers. T procedure is a slow one, but I have never yet become reconciled to idea of beginning my day in a hurry.

Bitter dose number two introduces itself when I begin to read story in a few-days-old magazine only to find the middle of the pa cut out. The offending scissors, of course, contrive to wait un the end of the story, for at the beginning—that would warn me—a the deception must be complete. Usually there are a few words left one side of the cut, which connect the top and bottom, and I try guess at the omissions. This is fatal, for it is impossible, and my nor too-brilliant mind is thrown into a violent state of tangled chaos a companied by frequent doublings of fists. The upshot of it all is th
I abandon my magazine, hoping (as much as my muddled brain a lows) that the scissors grow as dull as the brain of the person w used them.

My third arrow of vengeance is directed toward the man, woma or child who misplaces my pencils. Just a small misdemeanor, you say but I am sure that wars have started over less. Well I remember th day I bought five pencils and laid them on my table. Some days lat when I went to get one, I found that they had been diminished by ex actly five. Upon asking my mother for a pencil, I was told that could use hers. Hers? Now I had recovered one-fifth of my lost pos sessions. Two more I found behind a picture on the living room tab
I never found the others. Just when I want one, it turns up behind my father's ear, shortened probably by a good two inches. I resort to carrying pencils in my pockets and the points snap off; I carry them in my books only to lose them. Is there no hope for me—must I always seek in vain for my coveted tools? However, I still cling to a somewhat faded belief that some day my pencils will remain untouched. Once I have withstood all three of these mental and physical stumbling blocks,
I am ready to seek that "balm of hurt minds" as a refuge from all further tribulations.

PROFESSIONAL CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

At the monthly meeting of the Professional Club, held at Golden's Hotel, new officers were elected as follows: Dr. Frederick Bakon, president; Rita Smith, vice-president; Rev. Donald H. Campbell, secretary; and Erna White, treasurer.

The club enjoyed talks by several distinguished persons. Senator John Stevenson spoke on "Peace at Any Price;" Mr. Emmett Wellwood, "Science in Business," Dr. Esther Halliley, "Healthy Habits"; and Miss Alma Fay, "Art Trends."

The plans for constructing a clubhouse are going on rapidly under the direction of Chairman Robert Spousta and his committee, which consists of Miss Rita Rogers, Dr. Neil Sweet, Hon. Harry Jones, Miss June Taylor, Miss Violet Corbishley, and Judge Walter Parker.

The committee has chosen William Floor and George Despins as head architects. It has also engaged the services of the mural painter, Robert Bradshaw, Miss Marjorie Nares, the interior decorator, and

FIVE ARRESTED IN FRAY

By Edward Galligan

Pandemonium reigned on Main Street last night, and as a result seven windows in Hastings' General Store are today broken, one prominent citizen is sporting a "shiner," and Judge Alvin Wells is $10 richer than he was yesterday.

At 9 o'clock last night Chief of Police George Walker received a frantic phone call from Veronica Lucey, proprietress of Ye Hotte Bunne Sandwich Shoppe. According to Miss Lucey some one was being kicked about the street near the Robert Wilson Horse Trough. Arriving on the scene, Chief Walker, accompanied by Fish and Game Warden Raymond Smith and Dog Officer "Lefty" Cabana, discovered Thomas "Hot Feet" Campion and Raymond "Dapper" Carney battling one another to the tune of Pete Briggs' hand organ. When the law appeared, Carney was siting on top of Campion and massaging that unfortunate gentleman's nose and chin feverishly. Campion thereupon arose and hurled Carney through Storekeeper Hastings' front window.

At this time Bob Smith, Ben Riley, and Herb Bliss jumped
